A TARIFF COMEDY.

Spain Finally Won In the "Case of the Screw Propeller."

Every British captain calling at Spanish ports is familiar with the "case of the screw propeller." The story is told for the benefit of landmen in Mr. G. H. B. Ward's "The Truth About Spain." "The steel screw of a cargo steamer which traded with Bilbao and other northern ports was damaged beyond repair during a rough voyage. The vessel was beached pending the arrival of a new propeller from England.

"At last, when the steamer was about to sail, the captain was informed that he had to pay a duty for putting ashore a manufactured article—namely, the 'scrapped' or broken propeller. The captain protested and offered to drop it into the sea, but the officials were obdurate. They seized the ship and demanded payment. The captain declined to ease the tension by the customary bribe and complained to the British foreign office.

"The duty was returned, but the captain was warned to be very careful about contraband, and for several years nothing occurred. Several months later some slight inaccuracy in the ship's papers and the declaration of cargo gave the excise men their chance, and the vessel was not allowed to leave until a heavy fine, corresponding to the original propeller duty, was paid."

Why She Worried.

"But, mother, why do you object to my being pleasant to the young men? You can't hope to keep me with you always, you know. One of them will take me away from you some day."

"Take you away from me? Well, if that happens I shall not complain. It is the certainty that none of the young men who have been coming here so far would take you away that has worried both your father and me."
